

ABSTRACT

A method for recovering data in a storage device is provided in which information related to a first data structure is defined with a plurality of copies of a second data structure and the information related to the first data structure is rebuilt using the plurality of copies of the second data structure upon corruption thereof.